General requirements for the use of the certification mark

General rules for product certification (2006-05-05) chapter 5

Having been granted a product certificate, the certificate holder has the right to use the product certification mark to show that the product is certified.

The right to use the certification mark is always based on Inspecta's certification decision and only concerns products included in the product certificate. Inspecta controls/supervises the right to use the mark on the product and in its marketing.

The certification mark may only be used on certified products fulfilling the requirements set in the requirement documents as well as the requirements of the certification decision. The mark is attached directly to the product, product package, a tag attached to the product or to commercial documents accompanying the product - mainly in this order. The requirement documents present the information that requires to be shown with the mark. The identification sign of the certificate holder shall be on all marked products.

The mark shall be attached in an easily detectable position not subject to wear and tear during storage, transportation and other corresponding handling of product.

The certification mark may be used in the marketing of the product. Use of the mark shall not cause misunderstanding about the scope and meaning of the certificate.

If the mark is used contrary to the rules, Inspecta may, in addition to withdrawing the certificate, take legal actions.
